Jim Reece practiced at a large firm for more than 30 years, handling cases throughout the United States and abroad, before forming a firm with his daughter, Wynne Reece, upon her graduation from law school. During his career, Jim has represented clients in cases involving business disputes, personal injury, product liability, mass torts, industrial accidents, arson, antitrust, financial products, insurance coverage, professional liability, and real estate. Jim has represented a number of Fortune 500 companies on some of their most important and complex cases. Jim has also represented insurers. Jim understands litigation strategies and dynamics from both the plaintiff and defense sides.

When practicing with Wynne, Jim represented corporations, limited liability companies, partnerships, creative entrepreneurs, professional entities (such as law firms and health care practices), and individuals, in a variety of commercial matters, including general structure, contracts, employee and contractor documents, client relations and disputes, investor growth strategy, buy-sell agreements, acquisitions, real estate, and mediation.
